Butler, PA - True to life sculptures. True to Keystone Ridge Designs' standards of quality, creativity and craftsmanship. That is what creates the marriage between Trueblood Studios' sculpting expertise and Keystone Ridge Designs' innovative Puddin Drippins line of children's furniture with the introduction of the "Story for Two" sculpture.

Keystone Ridge Designs, Inc., a designer, manufacturer and marketer of exclusive site furniture, broke ground with an industry first in 2003 when they launched their Puddin Drippins line of metal site furnishings that are completely "kid appropriate" in size and shape. Recently they have expanded upon that collection with the introduction of the "Story for Two" piece, a combination of children-inspired bronze statues and Keystone Ridge Designs' Puddin Drippins Reading Bench.

The sculptures are designed by artist L'Deane Trueblood. Working mostly with children as subjects, L'Deane is known for creating highly sought-after, life-size bronze statues that grace town parks, botanical gardens, professional courtyards, streetscapes, museums and private collections across the world. In this unique collaboration with Keystone Ridge Designs, L'Deane has masterfully created the children "Ricky" and "Riley" specifically to sit atop the classic kids-sized Reading bench to share a 'story for two.'

The Reading bench is covered by patent no. des. 376,270 and is safeguarded with Keystone Ridge Designs trademark KEYSHIELD® 7-15 mil thickness powder coating.

The Reading Bench has long been a popular design for Keystone Ridge Designs and combining it with the sculptures provides a captivating piece that will add an artistic and creative nuance to any site or landscape.
